

Integration of sensory processes is essential for the healthy development of the process of learning. Faulty integration gives rise to number of anomalies contributing to development of various learning as well as developmental and behavioral disorders. Thus, it is essential to restore correct sensation to deal with these disorders. JEAN PIAGET'S work, we found extremely impressive and showed maximum practical application. Perception is the cognitive ability to receive and make sense of incoming stimuli. Thus faulty integration of sensory processes becomes important factor for causation and maintenance of various learning disorders. These children do present with awkwardness, clumsy behaviour and hyperactivity. Various children prototype – Homoeopathic profile describe these features

Homoeopathy is a Holistic, individualistic science which was discovered by Dr. SAMUEL HAHNEMANN in the year 1790 in German. Homoeopathy prepares the child to receive other necessary experiences for learning like sensory integration, special education etc. It provides good support and makes the much important job of educators and therapists easier in taking the child further up on the learning curve.

Number of Homoeopathic drugs in the proving have brought out characteristic features which we relate to learning disorders like:

Makes mistakes in writing and speaking

Omits final letter or letters of a word when writing (Lac caninum = Hering page 515)

Uses wrong syllabus, mixes up letters and syllables or omits parts of words (Hering page 91)

While writing transposing letters: China2 Lyc2 (Kent Rep. 67) careful study of these drugs indicate presence of various other coordinates like:

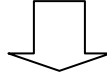

Clumsiness, awkward, hyperactivity

Bangs head while turning

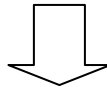

The physical, emotional, intellectual growth of the child depends on various factors. Psychosocial inputs which the child receives during early formative years are crucial among them. Any childhood disorder, whether intellectual, emotional or behavioural, presents with difficulties in multiple areas and therefore demands a multidisciplinary holistic approach. Jordan Homoeo child care centre provides such a multidisciplinary holistic approach.
